

EWOR's Inbox Zero Framework for Entrepreneurs

The Inbox Zero Framework

The Inbox Zero Framework, developed by Merlin Mann, is designed to help you clear your inbox and enhance mental clarity.

While originally created for managing emails, this framework can also be adapted for other communication platforms like Slack or WhatsApp.

For each email or message, there are four possible action steps: Delete, Postpone, Delegate or Answer.

Delete

Don't be afraid to delete emails that do not cause any harm if deleted.

Postpone

If you can postpone your answer or action associated with the email, postpone it to a later point in time or add it to your to-do list.

Delegate

Delegate the email to a team member or personal assistant of yours to handle it.

Answer

If typing a response takes less than two minutes, do it immediately.

We recommend using the email client Superhuman, a tool specifically designed for speed and efficiency. With features like super-speedy search, intuitive keyboard shortcuts, and split inboxes, it streamlines email management. Superhuman also lets you postpone and delegate emails, helping you clear your inbox and end each day with an empty inbox.

WhatsApp

WhatsApp allows you to both archive all messages and auto-unarchive any message from a person who texts you. While it doesn't have a "postpone" function, this feature enables you to maintain an Inbox Zero approach on WhatsApp as well.

Though, we recommend that you use Superhuman as your main communication tool, given you can easily set reminders and defer messages that don't require an immediate response — an essential prioritisation feature.
